Transient Stricken By Stroke at Mokena

The Mokena jail has been used as a lodging place by many transient wayfarers this winter and they have had a habit of not only staying for a night, but for a few days as well, until the village fathers have reached the point where they make the wayfarers move on the next morning. Monday night four men asked for a night's lodging. Tuesday morning when alderman J. G. Oswald called at the lockup to see if the men had left he found one man still there. When he ordered the transient to move, the latter appeared unable to walk. The alderman held him by the arm and started escorting the man up the sidewalk, when he suddenly fell in a heap at the feet of the alderman. Dr. E. G. McMahon was notified and thought the man had suffered a stroke.

Supervisor Wm. Kampe of Frankfort was notified and made arrangements to have the man taken to a hospital in Joliet.

Dislikes Hoosgow For Lodging Place

That some of the men who come to homes in Mokena asking for food are often impudent was demonstrated the other night at the home of Fred Steinhagen in Mokena when a man asked him if he could stay overnight at his place. When Mr. Steinhagen told him to go to the village station he disliked the idea.

Cop's Car Figures In Collision At Tinley Park

Mrs. Frank Schmutte, wife of a Tinley Park meat dealer figured in a near serious auto accident Tuesday afternoon in Tinley Park. She was driving south on Oak Park avenue and as she was turning off on the street running east known as the Oak Forest road, an automobile driven at a high rate of speed by a county policeman tried to pass and both cars collided. The policeman's car crashed into an electric light post in front of the Dini Tavern. The car was badly damaged, but luckily no one was hurt. The car of Mr. Schmutte was only slightly damaged.

Tinley Park people have been severely criticizing the police officer for running thru the heart of Tinley Park at the high rate of speed he was going at.

It is understood the auto did not belong to the police officer, so just what the outcome will be for damage claims is not known.

Tinley Firemen Fight Auto Fire

Late Tuesday afternoon a Terraplane automobile said to have been driven by a man from Kankakee caught fire right off the intersection of 187th and Crawford. The driver fled from the burning car. About an hour later he came back from Kankakee with another car. In the meantime a nearby filling station attendant had notified the Tinley Park Fire Department and when the firemen arrived the flames were shooting out of the top of the car. The interior of the car was burned out, but the tires did not burn. What caused the fire is not known.

Editor Surprised On Reaching The Half Century Mark

The editor had a real surprise sprung on him last Sunday afternoon when a group of cousins from Blue Island, Roseland and Chicago came trooping up the walk singing "Happy Birthday to You" in honor of the half century mark the editor attained on January 9th.

The affair was engineered by the editor's better half and she surely knew how to keep a secret as also did the rest of the feminine members of the editor's household.

The surprise came prepared for a good time which they certainly had and which they greatly enjoyed. Being the only living relative, on their father's side, the cousins made that much more of the editor's natal day. A sumptuous supper was enjoyed. Various games, music and singing added to the merriment of the celebration. The honored host was also remembered quite liberally with gifts commemorating the fact that he was stepping right along on life's way.

The guest list consisted of: Mr. and Mrs. George Heim, sons Donald and Jack and Mr. and Mrs. Peter W. Heintz, all of Blue Island; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thomas, 10840 Eberhart Ave., Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schicht, 11110 Parnell Ave., Chicago.

While Raymond Andres of Tinley Park was driving toward Tinley on the Oak Forest road, he failed to make the little turn near the Harper crossing at the east end of the village Wednesday afternoon and as a result his car sideswiped a telephone pole and was ditched. Fred Hopman was the first to reach the wrecked car and when he pulled Andres out of the wreckage the latter was unconscious. Police Chief C. A. Steinhagen took him home after he regained consciousness. The car which was badly damaged, was towed to the English Bros., garage in Tinley Park.

4 BANDS IN BAND CONCERT AT TINLEY

Four bands participated in a real musical treat in the Tinley Park School auditorium Wednesday evening when the school bands of Frankfort, New Lenox, Mokena and Tinley Park were heard in a band concert. All the bands, with the exception of the Frankfort band, are young bands. All are under the direction of R. B. Wight of Joliet.

The first part of the concert program was played by the Frankfort Band and was as follows:

March, His Honor by Fillmore
Overture, Panora by Holmes
Gypsy Love Song—Trombone solo by Victor Herbert.
Medley, Yankee Rhythm by Lake
March, Anchors Aweigh, Zimmerman.

Suite, London Suite by Vail
Novelty, Comin' Round the Mountain by Fillmore.

Part II of the program was played by the Frankfort and New Lenox bands and was as follows:

March, Victory March, University of New Orleans.
Selection, Martha by Von Flotow
March, Fight On, University of Southern California.

Serenade, At Dusk by Innis.
March, Footlifter, by Fillmore.

Part III of the program was played by the newly formed Tinley Park band which has been in existence only three months. These young musicians certainly show marked talent and musical ability. Their selections were:

Lightly Row.
Melody
Clarinet Duet
Abide With Me.
Cherry Waltz.

Part IV included the Tinley Park, Mokena and New Lenox Bands and their numbers were:

Rosebud Waltz.
Magdelin Waltz.
Vasil Waltz.
Dutch Choral.
Lillian Waltz.
March—Dot and Phil.

The concert program came to a close with the combined four bands playing "America."

It was really quite amazing to note the very rapid progress that the new bands have made and how they have learned to play difficult numbers in such a short time. The band members and Director Wight are to be commended on the splendid showing of the bands. The Frankfort band is the oldest one of the group, being three years old. These bands are an asset to the communities and not only give the young people a musical education, but are also a factor in bringing the people of these communities more closely together.

Howard Spiess of Mokena Figures In Auto Accident

While Howard Spiess of Mokena was on his way home from Chicago last Saturday morning, his automobile was wrecked and he had a narrow escape from injury when another car crashed into his car at the intersection of 87th street and Crawford. There were five persons, all foreigners, in the other car. The driver suffered several broken ribs and a girl rider sustained cuts about the head. The injured were taken to the Holy Cross hospital.

Mr. Spiess's automobile which was badly damaged was towed to Mokena by the Cooper & Hostert wrecking.

AGED ORLAND RESIDENT TAKEN BY DEATH WED.

Mrs. Christ Grosskopf, aged 85 years died in her home at Orland Park 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning January 13th following a lingering illness.

The deceased was born in Germany and came with her parents to the United States while a young girl.

Surviving are three sons and one daughter and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held on Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p. m., at the Christ Lutheran church in Orland Park with Rev. A. Lach officiating. Burial will be in the Lutheran cemetery.

Orland WPA Wreck Headquarters

Orland Park had quite an exciting time for a short time last Thursday afternoon when the local WPA camp staged a free for all fight. Shortly after the men were paid off, a group of workers got on a drunk and started to clean house.

The village board had rented a house from Mrs. Nora Felten for a local office and headquarters.

The rioters smashed up furniture, hurled benches through the windows and tore the electric light fixtures from the ceiling. A stove with fire in it was knocked over and was also thrown out doors together with the live coals. After they had done all the damage they could think of, the rioters left. It is said they went on a rampage because they were not satisfied with the wages they are receiving for doing road building work.

Mrs. Felten took the matter up with the village board about being reimbursed for the damage done to her property. The village board did not feel that the village was responsible and the matter was taken up with the WPA office in Chicago and it is understood that the men who did the damage have been asked to make the damage good out of their own pockets.

To Present Play At Manhattan

The Young People of the St. Paul Evangelical church of Manhattan will give a three act comedy entitled "Don't Darken My Door" on Friday, evening, January 29th at 8 o'clock at the Manhattan Theatre. Home Heating Hints

Deep Bed of Fire Burns Less Fuel Than "Skinny" One; Saves Time and Labor.

A GREAT many home-owners are under the impression that they save coal by putting only a little coal on a furnace fire. As a matter of fact, that's one of the surest ways to actually waste fuel that I know of. A "flimsy" fire burns coal quickly, has a tendency to go out easily, won't deliver sufficient heat, and makes repeated refueling necessary.

The truly economical way is to keep a deep fire bed at all times. It should always be up to a level with the bottom of the fire door. In mild weather, of course, you can leave a little heavier layer of ash on the grates. This will keep the fire burning very slowly, yet keep enough coal burning to provide sufficient heat should the outside temperature drop suddenly.

Let me repeat this warning: After putting fresh coal on the fire, be sure to leave an exposed spot of live coals directly in front of the fire door. This "hot-spot" will act as a pilot light and ignite the gases that come up from the fresh fuel. Allow these gases to become totally burned before checking the fire.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

by
S. S. VAN DINECopyright S. S. Van Dine
WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Philo Vance, famous detective and John F. X. Markham, district attorney for New York county are dining in Vance's apartment when Vance receives an anonymous telephone message informing him of a "disturbing psychological tension at Professor Ephraim Garden's apartment" advising that he read up on radio-active sodium, consult a passage in the Aeneid and counseling that "Equanimity is essential." Professor Garden is famous in chemical research. The message, decoded by Vance, reminds him that Professor Garden's son Floyd and his puny cousin, Woode Swift, are addicted to horse-racing.

"You know this Floyd Garden well?"

Vance nodded. "Fairly well. He's a member of the Far Meadows club and I've often played polo with him. He's a five-goaler and owns a couple of the best ponies in the country. I tried to buy one of them from him once—but that's beside the point. The fact is, young Garden has invited me on several occasions to join him and his little group at the apartment when the out-of-town races were on. It seems he has a direct loud-speaker service from all the tracks, like many of the horse fanatics. The professor disapproves, in a mild way, but he raises no serious objections because Mrs. Garden is rather inclined to sit in and take her chances on a horse now and then."

"Have you ever accepted his invitation?" asked Markham.

"No," Vance told him. Then he glanced up with a far-away look in his eyes. "But I think it might be an excellent idea."

"Come, come, Vance!" protested Markham. "Even if you see some cryptic relationship between the disconnected items of this message you've just received, how, in the name of Heaven, can you take it seriously?"

Vance drew deeply on his cigarette and waited a moment before answering.

"You have overlooked one phrase in the message: 'Equanimity is essential,' he said at length. 'One of the great race-horses of today happens to be named Equanimity. He belongs in the company of such immortals of the turf as Man o' War, Exterminator, Gallant Fox, and Reigh Count. Furthermore, Equanimity is running in the Rivermont Handicap tomorrow.'"

"Still I see no reason to take the matter seriously," Markham objected.

Vance ignored the comment and added "Moreover, Doctor Miles Siefert told me at the club the other day that Mrs. Garden had been quite ill for some time with a mysterious malady."

Markham shifted in his chair and broke the ashes from his cigar.

"The affair gets more muddled by the minute," he remarked irritably. "What's the connection between all these commonplace data and that precious phone message of yours?" He waved his hand contemptuously toward the paper which Vance still held.

"I happen to know," Vance answered slowly, "who sent me this message."

"Ah, yes?" Markham was obviously skeptical.

"Quite. It was Doctor Siefert."

Markham showed a sudden interest.

"Would you care to enlighten me as to how you arrived at this conclusion?" he asked in a satirical voice.

"It was not difficult," Vance answered, rising and standing before the empty hearth, with one arm resting on the mantel. "To begin with, I was not called to the telephone personally. Why? Because it was some one I know. To continue, the language of the message bears the earmarks of the medical profession. 'Psychological tension' and 'resists diagnosis' are not phrases ordinarily used by the layman, although they consist of commonplace enough words. To go another step: the message obviously assumes that I am more or less acquainted with the Garden household and the race-track passion of young Garden. Therefore, we get the results that the sender of the message is a doctor whom I know and one who is aware of my acquaintance with the Gardens. The only doctor who fulfills these conditions, and who, incidentally, is middle-aged and cultured and highly judicial—Currie's description, y'know — is Miles Siefert. And, added to this simple deduction, I happen to know that Siefert is a Latin scholar—I once encountered him at the Latin society club-rooms. Another point in my favor is the fact that he is the family physician of the Gardens and would have ample opportunity to know about the galloping horses—and perhaps about Equanimity in particular—in connection with the Garden household."

"That being the case," Markham protested, "why don't you phone him and find out exactly what's back of his cryptography?"

"My dear Markham—oh, my dear Markham! Siefert would not only indignantly repudiate any knowledge of the message, but would automatically become the first obstacle in any bit of prying I might decide to do. The ethics of the medical profession are most fantastic; and Siefert, as becomes his unique position, is a fanatic on the subject. From the fact that he communicated with me in this roundabout way I rather suspect that some grotesque point of honor is involved. Perhaps his conscience overcame him for the moment, and he temporarily relaxed his adherence to what he considers his code of honor. . . . No, no, that course wouldn't do at all. I must ferret out the matter for myself—as he undoubtedly wishes me to do."

"But what is this matter that you feel called upon to ferret out?" persisted Markham. "Granting all you say, I still don't see how you can regard the situation as in any way serious."

"One never knows, does one?" drawled Vance. "Still, I'm rather fond of the horses myself, don't y'know."

Markham seemed to relax and fitted his manner to Vance's change of mood.

"And what do you propose to do?" he asked good naturedly.

Vance looked up whimsically. "The public prosecutor of New York—that noble defender of the rights of the common people—to wit: the Honorable John F. X. Markham—must grant me immunity and protection before I'll consent to answer."

Markham's eyelids drooped a little as he studied Vance. He was familiar with the serious import that often lay beneath the other's most frivolous remarks.

"Are you planning to break the law?" he asked.

"Oh, yes—quite," he admitted nonchalantly. "Jailable offense, I believe."

Markham studied him for another moment.

"All right," he said, "without the slightest trace of lightness. 'I'll do what I can for you. What's it to be?'"

Vance took another sip of the Napoleon.

"Well, Markham old dear," he announced with a half smile, "I'm going to the Gardens' penthouse tomorrow afternoon and play the horses with the younger set."

As soon as Markham had left us that night, Vance's mood changed. A troubled look came into his eyes, and he walked up and down the room pensively.

"I don't like it, Van," he murmured, as if talking to himself. "I don't at all like it. Siefert isn't the type to make a mysterious phone call like that, unless he has a very good reason for doing so. It's quite out of character, don't y'know. He's a dashed conservative chap, and no end ethical. There must be something worrying him deeply. But why the Gardens' apartment? The domestic atmosphere there has always struck me as at least superficially normal—and now a man as dependable as Siefert gets jittery about it to the extent of indulging in shillin'-shocker technique. It's deuced queer."

He stopped pacing the floor and looked at the clock.

"I think I'll make the arrangements. A bit of snooping is highly indicated."

He went into the anteroom, and a moment later I heard him dialing a number on the telephone. When he returned to the library he seemed to have thrown off his depression. His manner was almost flippant.

"We're in for an abominable lunch tomorrow, Van," he announced, pouring himself another pony of cognac. "And we must torture ourselves with the viands at a most ungodly hour—noon. What a time to ingest even good food!" He sighed. "We're lunching with young Garden at his home. Woode Swift will be there and also an insufferable creature named Lowe Hammle, a horsy gentleman from some obscure estate on Long Island. Later we'll be joined by various members of the sporting set, and together we'll indulge in that ancient and fascinating pastime of laying wagers on the thoroughbreds."

He rang for Currie and sent him out to fetch a copy of the Morning Telegraph.

"One should be prepared. Oh, quite. It's been years since I handicapped the horses."

Although I was well aware that Vance had some serious object in lunching with young Garden the following day and in participating in the gambling on the races, I had not the slightest suspicion, at the time, of the horrors that were to follow. On the afternoon of April 14 occurred the first grim act of one of the most atrocious multiple crimes of this generation. And to Doctor Siefert must go, in a large measure, the credit for the identification of the criminal, for had he not sent his cryptic and would-be anonymous message to Vance, the truth would probably never have been known.

I shall never forget that fatal Saturday afternoon. And aside from the brutal Garden murder, that afternoon will always remain memorable for me because it marked the first mature sentimental episode, so far as I had ever observed, in Vance's life. For once, the cold impersonal attitude of his analytical mind melted before the appeal of an attractive woman.

CHAPTER II

Shortly before noon the next day we arrived at Professor Garden's beautiful skyscraper apartment, and were cordially, and a little exuberantly, greeted by young Garden.

Floyd Garden was a man in his early thirties, erect and athletically built. He was about six feet tall, with powerful shoulders and a slender waist. His hair was almost black, and his complexion swarthy. His manner, while easy and casual, and with a suggestion of swagger, was in no way offensive. He was not a handsome man: his features were too rugged, his eyes set too close together, his ears protruded too much, and his lips were too thin. But he had an undeniable charm, and there was a quiet submerged competency in the way he moved and in the rapidity of his mental reactions.

"There are only five of us for lunch, Vance," he remarked breezily. "The old gentleman is fussing with his test-tubes and Bunsen burners at the university; the mater is having a grand time playing sick. But Pop Hammle is coming—rum old bird, but a good sport; and we'll also be burdened with beloved cousin Woode. You know Swift, I believe, Vance. Queer crab, Woody."

He pondered a moment with a wry face.

"Can't figure out just how he fits into this household. Dad and the mater seem inordinately fond of him—sorry for him, perhaps; or maybe he's the kind of serious, sensitive guy they wish I'd turned out to be. I don't dislike Woode, but we have little in common except the horses. Only, he takes his betting too seriously to suit me—he hasn't much money, and his wins or losses mean a lot to him. Of course, he'll go broke in the end."

Vance had been watching Garden covertly during this rambling recital of domestic intimacies.

"I know you hate mysteries, and there's apt to be some funny things happening here this afternoon," Garden continued. "Woode has been acting queer for the past couple of weeks, as if some secret sorrow was gnawing at his mind."

"Any specific psychopathic symptoms?" Vance asked lightly.

"No-o." Garden pursed his lips and frowned thoughtfully. "But he's developed a curious habit of going upstairs to the roof-garden as soon as he's placed a large bet, and he remains there alone until the result of the race has come through."

"Nothing very unusual about that," Vance made a deprecatory motion with his hand. "Many gamblers, d'ye see, are like that."

"You're probably right," Garden admitted reluctantly. "But I wish he'd bet moderately, instead of plunging like a fool whenever he's hot for a horse."

"By the by," asked Vance, "why do you particularly look for strange occurrences this afternoon?"

Garden shrugged. "The fact is," he replied, after a short pause, "Woody's been losing heavily of late, and today's the day of the big Rivermont Handicap. I have a feeling he's going to put every dollar he's got on Equanimity, who'll undoubtedly be the favorite . . . Equanimity!" He snorted with undisguised contempt. "That rail-lugger! Probably the second greatest horse of modern times—but what's the use?"

He looked up solemnly. "And that, Vance, means trouble if Equanimity doesn't come in. It means a blow-up of some kind. I've felt it coming for over a week. It's got me worried. To tell you the truth, I'm glad you picked this day to sit in with us."

"Very interesting situation," commented Vance. "I agree in the main with what you say regarding Equanimity. But I think you're too harsh, and I'm not convinced that he's a rail-lugger because of any innate passion for wood . . . But as you were sayin', the psychological situation hereabout has you worried. I gather there's a super-charged atmosphere round this charmin' aerie."

"That's it, exactly," Garden answered almost eagerly. "Super-charged is right. Nearly every day the mater asks, 'How's Woody?' And when the old gentleman comes home from his lab at night he greets me with a left-handed 'Well, my boy, have you seen Woody today?'"

Vance made no comment on these remarks. Instead he asked in a peculiarly flat voice: "Do you consider this recent hyper-tension in the household due entirely to your cousin's financial predicament and his determination to risk all he has on the horses?"

Garden started slightly and then settled back in his chair.

"No, damn it!" he answered a little vehemently. "And that's another thing that bothers me. A lot of the goliwogs we're harboring are due to Woode's cuckoo state of mind, but there are other queer invisible animals springing up and down the corridors. I can't figure it out. The mater's illness doesn't make sense either. And there's funny business of some kind going on among the gang that drifts in here nearly every afternoon to play the races."

Lesson for January 17

JESUS THE WATER OF LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 4:7-26.
GOLDEN TEXT—Whoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst. John 4:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answering a Woman's Question.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How a Stranger Became a Friend.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Meets My Greatest Needs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Meets Our Deepest Need.

Life, light, water, bread are elemental, fundamental things. Life must come from God. But it can exist only where there is light, and only God gives light.

It is therefore a blessed and significant fact that Jesus was declared to be the life of men. He also says of himself that he is the "light of the world" (John 9:5); "the bread of life" (John 6:35). In our lesson today we see Him as the one who gives "living water" (v. 10).

The incident at Jacob's well in Sychar took place when Jesus, leaving Jerusalem because of increasing hindrance to his work, goes up to Galilee. Unlike his Jewish brethren, who detoured around the land of the hated "half-breed" Samaritans, he "must needs go through Samaria," for there was a sin-sick soul that needed him.

Space will not permit a full consideration of all the beauty and the depth of spiritual truth found in this story.

I. A Sinner Tacitly Approached (vv. 7-15).

Every Christian is by his very calling a soul-winner. We dare not delegate this responsibility to the pastor or missionary. As soul-winners we are vitally interested in our Lord's approach to this woman who was far from God, apparently hopelessly involved in sinful associations, a citizen of a hostile nation and an adherent of another religious faith.

By asking a favor of her he tactfully placed himself (as does any petitioner) for the moment, on her own plane. He was not a distant, learned religious leader deigning to cast a bit of religious philosophy to her. He was a tired, thirsty man asking for a drink of water.

But he was more! He was the gracious Son of God, ready to give the water of life.

II. A Moral Problem Faced (vv. 16-18).

One may speak knowingly of the promises of God's Word, and may understand the "way of salvation," but one will never find peace and joy until there is a frank and open facing of sin in the life. Let us make no mistake at this point, for the moral law of God is the same now as it was on that far-off day when Jesus brought the woman of Samaria face to face with her own sin.

III. A Theological Problem Solved (vv. 19-24).

Possibly in an effort to evade her moral problem by theological discussion (a common practice in our day, too), and partly because of her ignorance of true worship, she asks a question about a controversial matter relating to outward ceremony. Is it not a singular thing how men who know nothing of spiritual life delight in the propagation and defense of organizations, and in the conduct of outward religious exercises?

True worship is revealed (v. 23) as being (1) "In spirit." We do not cast aside all external helps to worship, but real worship goes through and beyond both place and symbol to real soul-union with God (2) "In truth." Sham, superstition, hypocrisy, have no place in true worship. We can worship in truth only when we really know the truth. MacLaren rightly said, "The God to whom men attain by any other path than his historical revelation of himself is a dim, colorless abstraction, a peradventure, an object of fear or hope, as may be, but not of knowledge." Truly spoke Jesus— "We know what we worship" (v. 22).

IV. The Messiah Declared (vv. 25, 26).

Jesus honors this poor fallen woman by making to her his first declaration of himself as the Messiah. He is the high and exalted one, but he is at the same time the friend of sinners. To the learned ruler of the Jews, Nicodemus, he spoke of the new birth. To the poor woman of Samaria he declares his Messiahship.

And she forthright left her water pot and went to bring others to him.

Height of Our Destiny

It is from out of the depths of our humility that the height of our destiny looks grandest. Let me truly feel that in myself I am nothing, and at once, through every inlet of my soul, God comes in, and is everything in me.—W. Mountford.

Love and Fears

The warm loves and fears, that swept over us as clouds, must lose their finite character and blend with God, to attain their own perfection.—Emerson.

Fillmore, "Luxury-Loving Monster," Brought in Tub

Uncritical writers are fond of observing that Millard Fillmore was the most uninspiring and least impressive of all Presidents. But he did one big thing for the country. He introduced the bathtub to official and polite society.

Eighty-five years ago, a Cincinnati merchant imported one from England and Fillmore had a chance at it, and then he ordered the war department to call for bids. In 1851 the White House bathtub was installed and Fillmore was denounced as an unholy plutocrat, a luxury-loving monster!—Tulsa World.

New Lighting, Even
Bubbles in Color
To Beautify Fair

NEW YORK, (Special).—None of the scientific discoveries or developments being hurried from the laboratories to make the New York World's Fair unusual and thrilling will produce more startling results than the latest technique in illumination.

This statement was issued by Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation, at the inauguration of experiments by the Fair's staff of engineers and illumination experts and their consultants.
These men are already at work with quarter-inch scale models of the Fair, types of lighting equipment never before used in comprehensive manner, and utterly new principles never developed practically. They are dealing with everything from fluorescent dies and colored bubbles to concentrating lamps and floodlight systems.

The plan is not to create spectacular effects in the usual sense of the term, says Mr. Whalen, but rather to create designs in light that will make their appeal through their magnitude and their sheer beauty.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Sacrament" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 10.

The Golden Text was, "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies" (Psalms 23:5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory. But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; But to sit on my right hand and on my left is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared" (Mark 10:35-40).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook,
"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:
"The finger-prints of divine Science show the way our Master trod, and require of Christians the proof which he gave, instead of mere profession"
(p. 242).

Let's Get Together

By THE SCRIPTURE

What Is the True Church?

"And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1:22-23).
"And he is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence." (Col. 1:18).

How Does One Become a Member of the True Church?

"Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." (Acts 2:47).

"For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." 1Cor.12:13.

How May One Remain a Member of It?

Jesus said, "Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine;
no more can ye, except ye abide in me." (John 15:4).

Who Is the Builder of the True Church?

"And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall

The following essays were selected as the best written in high school English this week:

What I Consider Good Sportsmanship in School Life. Courtesy is one of the most necessary things in school life in showing sportsmanship. Be as considerate as possible about other people's feelings. Do not make fun of other people's grades or remarks, because in all probabilities you would yourself be the very one to be antagonized over such a manner. Try to help a pupil in every possible way, especially if he has been absent. Be sure to watch that you do not cheat because it hurts you just as much as missing it, and also shows bad sportsmanship on your part.

In all cases of an argument the teacher is right or is supposed to be considered right because of their knowledge or superiority. It is not sportsmanship to show any grudges or try to take it out on a person in school. Try and make it as easy as possible for a teacher because he is looking out for your own good and advantage. Be as pleasant as possible in all cases and tasks. Oliver Lauffer, freshman.

What I Call Good Sportsmanship. When a team wins I call it good sportsmanship not to brag about it or let it go to their head and think they can't be beaten by anyone, because when you get too sure of yourself something is likely to happen. You are never so good you can't get better or beaten.

If you are a looser, do your best in the game and don't get mad and yell like a coyote for you only make it worse for yourself. You should have the same attitude as if you were a winner. Take the defeat good-heartedly and you will get along a great deal better than any other way.

Booing is not necessary; it is not the right attitude to have in life, for there are plenty of good things besides doing the wrong. If you do that you have the wrong attitude toward life. People will dislike you and will hold no respect for you whatever. Keep your head and don't let your temper run off with you and you will be a better sportsman.

In community life you should have respect for people and they will have more respect for you. Do unto others as you would like done to you. In school life you should remember co-operation to your teachers and friends and schoolmates. Remember the boy of today is the man of tomorrow and all these help you to be better citizens.

Roy Kohl, sophomore.

A Matter of Preference

JOHN OLCOTT'S parents had his wife all selected for him when Johnny was eighteen. Her name was Francesca, and she was a blonde.

Johnny was a gentleman but he didn't prefer her.

Francesca had money—a gold symphony of it—which explains everything. Johnny's parents had a name that meant something; the kind you put a "the" before, and can say best if you affect lorgnettes.

Francesca's people, whose name was Blake, wanted to mix the soft, resonant sound of the name of Olcott with the pleasant golden jingle of the Blake mint.

Johnny, at nineteen, was just a regular kid, a little above the average as to looks, very normal as to intelligence, and a firm believer in that Hollywood-originated slogan, "Be yourself or stay at home!"

Francesca, more or less away to school, had been in the background considerably until her eighteenth birthday. Then, she and Johnny became as inseparable as the Fourth of July and fireworks, simply because it was expected of them. If they found the affair a trifle flat as to romantic interest, they said nothing. They were Twentieth century sports.

Johnny thought she was terrible, but his parents were good scouts and had always stood by him, and he knew that they had educated him and taught him to be charming for Francesca Blake only. He felt he'd better play the game a little while for their sakes, and let them down easy. Then, too, of course, he didn't want to hurt Francesca's feelings. She was, he felt sure, greatly enamored of him. Johnny figured this out reluctantly, banking wholly on the expression in her eyes. (Not for nothing had Francesca doled out 50 cent pieces to the cinema industry.)

Francesca thought Johnny too childish for her technique. She wanted a he-man from the famous "great open spaces," wherever they were. Not in Boston, anyway, she decided. She had a good car and had tried to park it. She was getting old, Francesca reflected bitterly, and Johnny was the best material on hand. Then, too, she didn't want to hurt him too much. There was no ignoring the fact that he had been simply bowled over with her blonde loveliness from the start. He deserved, decided Francesca, some credit for that.

In a short while the inevitable happened. Johnny saw a brunette he wanted to meet. Francesca's pale, honeycolored sweetness was getting on his nerves. She was so nice! (Say it with your teeth together.) He decided his parents had an awful nerve to ask him to marry for money anyway, and he told them so.

The war was on. About the same time Francesca met a fellow whom she felt she could love, with a little honest persuasion. She was tired of Johnny. He was too perfect. She told her ma and pa and the war was on in that camp, too.

All this time Johnny and Francesca were going together—trying to be a couple of prize dumbbells, and both feeling like glorified martyrs because they were refraining from hurting each other's feelings.

Goodness knows how it would have ended if the two of them hadn't gone for a drive one lovely day. It happened that Francesca had been up half the night before with that species of toothache best described as gallopin', and Johnny had had a row with his family, only to come out with defeat and a splitting headache. You can see for yourself that they were stripped of pretense, company manners, and good nature. It didn't take long for the fireworks to start. They commenced with Johnny casually calling Francesca "Cesky," and for no good reason.

"Don't you dare call me that!" Francesca turned fierce eyes upon him.

Johnny was surprised at the placid Francesca bursting into flame like that, but he quickly lost his surprise in his grouch.

"What's the matter with it?"

"I hate it, that's all! It's worse than Lizz or Maggie."

"My mother's name is Maggie."

"Oh," said Francesca.

"What do you mean by making fun of my mother's name?" demanded Johnny, all keyed up for an argument.

"I didn't. I just said—"

"Blah! You knew her name was Maggie, all the time. I can't stand girls like you!"

"Why try it any longer?" Francesca asked, in a voice that had an icicle licked to a frazzle, as far as being cold goes.

"Try? Me? Ha-ha! You're the one who's been making all the heavy effort!"

"Me? You don't suppose I'd pick out anything like you, do you? Not while I have my mental health! I suppose you've been sitting around like an Egyptian mummy all these weeks!"

"Speaking of King Tut—you're not my idea of a queen, that's all."

"Oh!"

"Don't squander your words so."

Silence.

Lots more of it, heavy and impenetrable.

"You make me sick!" This from Johnny, and incidentally the end of the silence.

"You make me positively ill!"

They drove on—and on. Johnny was looking at Francesca out of the corner of his eye, and was thinking, "Gee, she has a comeback! Who would have guessed it? Look at that color! Boy—what fun I missed not getting her peeved before this! A little pep to her, at that. Why the dickens didn't she come to life before? Zowie, what a jam!"

He began to feel better and to be surprisingly glad that Francesca was beside him—so little, and flushed and, yes, blonde and cute!

Francesca had her thoughts, too. She felt lost. "The nerve of him!"

She tried to concentrate on that and couldn't. He had a line, after all, and she had thought him dumb. Good looking kid—sort of sweet.

Why hadn't she been bright enough to see through him? Of course he didn't like her. But why hadn't he snapped out of his stupor before, and shown a little spirit? What was the matter with her, anyway? A minute ago she hated him and now she was actually happy sitting beside him listening to his insults.

Despite the fact that she clenched her fists and dug her toes into her shoes, Francesca couldn't keep back a fat tear that trickled down her nose and dropped off into her lap. It didn't splash, but Johnny must have heard it, as he was looking away. He stopped the car.

"Francesca," he said in a new tone, "Say, don't cry—please."

"Who cares?"

"I do—honestly, Franny, all of a sudden. I do."

Johnny spoke emphatically, almost with gusto. Francesca was surprised. So was Johnny. However, ter than to flash an April smile at that stage of the game so she blubbered, "B-but you d-don't like blondes: Y-you l-like brunettes."

"What's your idea in bringing that up, anyway?" said Johnny. "Light or dark I'm sold on you!"

"O Johnny, I like you, too," said Francesca, now staging perfectly her April smile.

"Then," said Johnny, after he kissed her, I guess we're engaged."

Francesca giggled.

"Won't our mamas and papas be pleased?"

"Look here," said Johnny, sharply, placing his hands on Francesca's shoulders and turning her to face him. "Our parents don't figure in this racket at all! A good little healthy jam showed me the way to go home, and I get all the credit—see? I prefer you. I run this outfit. See?"

"Yes, dear," cooed Francesca, and Johnny, pacified and feeling as big as a great moment, started the car.

Geisha Girls Are Fading

From the Chorine Cla.s

Geisha girls still are charming and beautiful, but competition from other forms of entertainment is causing a steady although gradual decline in the number of geisha establishments, writes a Tokio United Press correspondent.

The popularity of so-called social saloons where pretty hostesses entertain the patrons, has cut into the demand for geisha singing and dancing, while the movies and girl revues have taken away another segment of the diversion—seeking public.

Geisha are paid from 3 to 15 yen an hour ($.90 to $1.50) to entertain in the tea-houses. The rate of pay depends upon the individual training, talents and accomplishments. It is a steep price for the ordinary citizen and he can have delightful feminine company in the resorts at a much more modest figure.

The geisha are among the more prosperous classes in Japan. The latest income tax figures place the annual income of a noted geisha, Katsutaro, at about $5,400.

The newest census of geisha establishments shows that the number of geisha in Japan has declined from 100,000 to 78,500 in the last ten years. The number in Tokio is 9,925, a fairly constant figure since this is the capital and there are many official or semi-official affairs at which geisha are in demand.

A new regulation that girls can not serve as hangyoku, or apprentice geishas, until they are fifteen, has also decreased the number of geisha. Formerly girls were started on this career at an early age, sometimes before reaching their teens.

Many geisha live by themselves, in snug little houses, with their professional "mamas" or managers and the girls have paid off the cost of servants. This is possible only when the girls have paid off the cost of their training. Others are grouped in geisha establishments, like professional troupes, with strict discipline prevailing and the managers handling the engagements and financial dealings.

The cabaret form of entertainment as known in the west is not permitted here. There are dance halls with dancing partners available at 20 sen per dance. But floor-show entertainment is not countenanced, the nearest thing to it in the western sense being the all-girl revues.

Life of Rail Ties Lengthened

Due to chemical treatment, the average life of a cross tie used by the railroads is now from twenty-five to thirty years. Before this practice of treating ties was adopted, the average life was from five to eight years, according to the Association of American Railroads.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington — During the recent bitter campaigning, both national political parties engaged in a good deal of palaver about the coal industry.

The Coal Industry

As usual, the politicians were patting the miners on the back, telling them what wonderful assets to the nation they are, and carrying their demagoguery further by criticism of the mine owners every now and then because it was popular with labor to attack employers. Altogether, it was a rather sorry spectacle and, I think, did not do credit to either side to any extent.

But in this report, I want to stress a very much less obvious phase of the problem than was made apparent in any of the electioneering. With all of the verbiage cast aside, with all of the political hoodwinking forgotten, there is a very deep and difficult problem in the coal industry. I think it can be summarized in one question: What is the future of coal, the coal industry, and the thousands of men who know no other source of livelihood than that which they eke out in the bowels of the earth?

This question, if proper analysis is made, encompasses more than the usual factors that operate in economics. It does that because of policies of the federal government, among states and among municipalities. Because of the attempts to influence votes, the whole question has got into politics and that of itself is ruinous, an obstacle to a scientific solution.

Not so many years ago coal mine owners and coal labor units had what amounted to a monopoly on our fuel supply. Then came oil, oil with all of the scientific development that followed in its wake. Despite this, operators and labor leaders continued to take their toll from the hapless user of coal for fuel, be that user a great factory or an individual consumer in furnace or round oak stove. But that was not all. Electricity came along with its constantly increasing automatic control. First, of course, in the larger communities and later it came to villages and farm homes. Still, the mine owners and the coal labor leaders followed an unwise course, still, they continued to take their toll and before they fully realized what the circumstance was, they had succeeded by their acts in building up a desire on the part of millions of people to use some other sort of fuel. The end is not yet, and that is why the subject is most important at this stage of our history.

During the Roosevelt administration we have seen an impetus given to public ownership of power plants never equalled. I think much of this development has gone on in a hit-and-miss fashion and that eventually the public will pay for the shiftless methods employed in development, but that is beside the point. The present question is whether our nation is going to continue to expand public ownership in such a way as to ruin an industry that is as much a part of our basic economic structure as any other unit of our natural life. I think sometimes it goes beyond that for the reason that, unless people are awakened to the fact that they are being hoodwinked to a considerable extent by public ownership propaganda, it is likely to spread and public ownership will become a frankenstein, a parasite on our body politic.

Public Ownership

When I referred to the destruction of a great industry, I had in mind the thought that the consequences will run in two directions. Yet, paradoxically as it may seem, they constitute a cycle. It works out like this: As the demand for coal declines, it is quite natural that production costs go up. When production costs go up, they eventually reach the point where a further diminution occurs in demand. When that decline in demand occurs, there is only one answer: Labor is thrown out of work because you cannot produce and have those products piled high in storage. It takes money to keep labor and machinery occupied. The coal itself, after being removed from the mines, represents money and it is subject as well to deterioration. So, the ultimate to be expected on this side of the picture is an industry dying of dry rot.

On the other side of the problem is an equally important factor at work. It takes an immense amount of capital, massed in corporate form, to maintain a going concern whether that concern be coal mining, railroading or any other of our great industries. These industries operate largely on funds obtained through the sale of stocks and bonds of the corporation. But it has always been true, and human nature shows no signs of changing, that capital is not attracted to, it does not seek investment in, a declining industry. There you have a possibility at least of insufficient funds to carry through for the coal mining industry until it can readjust itself to the new place it must occupy in our economic structure. It will occupy a new place because it will readjust itself, but it has not done so yet and the consequence of this condition is, in my opinion, coal mine labor is due for some very hard sledding in the next decade, notwithstanding the honeyed words of the politicians.

Now, to turn to the part that government plays in bringing about present conditions I have attempted to show how greed on the part of both capital and labor was responsible in a measure for building up what amounts to ill-will among many coal consumers. But the industry itself is not wholly responsible. Indeed, I rather hold the opinion that government is as much responsible for conditions as the industry itself, and when I say government, I must limit my reference to political demagogues. They always have been shortsighted and they are still shortsighted. They have been and they are now willing to sacrifice great masses of men and money for personal political gain of an entirely transitory character.

Blame Demagogues

I have said before in these columns that the country is being sadly kidded—it is almost tragic—by the wonders of such parasitic organizations as TVA. The public ownership crowd have had a willing leader in President Roosevelt and his hangers-on have promoted his policies of public ownership without being honest as to the ultimate goal, or the eventual effect.

It is not alone that there have been millions wasted in the development of the Tennessee valley electrical mirage. It is not so much that taxpayers throughout the country will be paying a bill and paying it over and over again, that causes me to complain. It is not so much that the Tennessee Valley Authority will never economically operated or become self-sustaining that brings this outburst. It is the fact that when a government, national, state or local, leads the way in this direction, it wields an influence upon a certain percentage of our population. Since public ownership advocates, in many instances, plain socialism, where in control of these agencies such as TVA, it is perfectly natural that they present to the taxpayers only the most rosy side of the story. They do not disclose to the taxpayers the adverse, the costly side, of the situation. Naturally then, hundreds of thousands of people believe that government can do this sort of thing better than private enterprise. They become convinced that private initiative has been turned into a spigot through which individual pocketbooks are drained. They do not realize that their pocketbooks are being drained much more heavily through public ownership by means of the taxes they take from you and me and everyone else. That is the sad story, made worse by the fact that through nearly four years the Washington government has been encouraging people to believe public ownership propaganda and distrust and destroy private investment.

Recent Treasury figures show that the Resettlement Administration has paid approximately $27,750,000 of its total appropriation of $134,518,000 for administrative expenses. That is, the organization which is the pride and joy of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell has paid that amount of money to job holders in trying to carry out the professor's impossible dream.

While the sum shown as used for administrative expenses by Professor Tugwell is small, compared to the billions of total waste in the Roosevelt administration, the proper way to consider this circumstance is on a percentage basis. If you take your pencil you can calculate that about 20 per cent or one-fifth of all the funds appropriated to Professor Tugwell for resettlement, has been used in management of his plan. It may be a fraction under 20 per cent, but it is so close that even the fastidious Mr. Tugwell would not quarrel about the difference.

One-fifth of an appropriation that is designed theoretically at least to serve for relief purposes is entirely too much. It is not as great perhaps as has happened with one or two other relief appropriations, but it has always been claimed that the Tugwell scheme was planned to re-establish those who have been resettled on a permanent basis. That is to say, it was planned that the bulk of the money should be used in providing those people with a fresh start in life, but I cannot see where they are getting the full measure of help intended if a lot of job holders sit around in Washington offices or in offices in various states using up one-fifth of the total lay-out of cash.

The Bored Are Boring—

People of Outstanding Personality
Are Interested, and Never Blase

"YOUNG people of today," a mother writes, "seem to regard it as a sign of immaturity or weakness to be thrilled with anything. Their idea of sophistication is to appear bored with everything, the having-done-all-seen-all attitude that finds it very difficult to be impressed with anything. It is most annoying to find that anything you can offer them for a good time seems to be inadequate, that the thrills of your own youth cannot be repeated for them. It seems to me they miss a great deal."

I would point out to this mother, says a woman writer of international note, that naturally we cannot expect that the thrills of our youth will equally impress the young people of this day. So much that came to us gradually as colorful experiences are a part of their daily background. But there is something definitely true in what she says of a pose, of a deliberate care never to seem impressed, of a pretense at being bored.

It may interest such young people to know that that super-sophisticate, G. K. Chesterton, said "there are no bores, only people who are bored." In other words there can be nothing interesting about a person who is bored!

That takes us right down to a bedrock fact that can be observed if we will note people of outstanding personality, people whom everybody finds interesting. Without exception they will be people who are vitally interested. They are never bored, never blase. They are able to give out what interests others, because through their interest in things and people about them they are constantly taking in. Their main charm is a certain aliveness, a vitality which has absolutely no relationship with being bored.

Uncle Phil Says:

A Man in Trouble

No matter how uncouth a man may be, if his character is firm and he faces trouble like a man, your heart warms to him.

Give a newly met man a chance to show his good qualities before rejecting him as a friend.

Solitude is not to be considered solely from a selfish standpoint. Society may profit much through the frequent individual adoption of it.

Our Failing

Crime goes unpunished because backbone coupled with indignation is not a frequent combination.

In youth, credulity is enormous, and skepticism is enormous; there is no middleground; and both are amusing.

Country people are surprised when a city man complains of crowds. They enjoy them.

Around the Town
New Lenox

Believe it or not but, its rumored around that Diamond Lil is being married within three months. J. F. is even buying her a wedding present.

Someone wants to know if R. B. three handsome boys from Joliet are, that make New Lenox their hangout every Tuesday and Sunday nights?

From the sounds of the conversation in the tavern Tuesday night, D. C. and T. H. would like to take up "flying" or go airplane riding often. E. O. D. is just waiting his chance to meet up with J. M.—wonder why? L. C. wonders too.

Someone wants to know if R. B. found his own coat yet? Seems as though he lost it New Year's eve.

From all reports Walt sure likes his hamburgers and onions. Ask John F. and Herb. S. just what kind of shows they like to see in Chicago. These two men can really name the best show places and tell you exactly where they are.

Imagine D. W.'s surprise to be called outside and find a man slumped over, lying in front of her feet. And imagine her surprise after creating a lot of excitement and calling for help to find it was only a 'dummy'. T. H. and P. S. really had fun all over town with the dummy who really looked like a man.

We'll bet B. M. and J. L. are glad that love scene from the play entitled, "The Dummy" is over. Or are you?

Yes sir, M. M. and F. R. have really decided the keep steady company. No more quarrelling now.

The "Around the Town" column has another new reported and writer—so watch your step everybody and keep clear of E. N.

From all reports P. B. and his gal had a rippen good time at the Anniversary dance in Manhattan Sunday night.

No one knew anything about the "Auction Sale Bill" published in the News-Bulletin last week, until A. B. brought it to light. Leave it to him he never misses out.

Yes, there is going to be another party soon—at the Trojans, this time—according to the boys about town. And they say that certain little 'Miss' who started the broadcasting station a few weeks ago, can have another job now. So long as someone doesn't get 'tuff' and cut the wires on her. The dopes all yours kid. The gang even offered to take a shovel and wheel barrow along to help her pick up dirt.

Some one wants to know if D. R. knows that E. M. walks in her sleep? Believe it or not, but M. M. slept with her arms wrapped around a floor lamp the other night.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE ARE IN DESPAIR

THE farmer who owned the big barn where the rats had lived was puzzled. After a few days he became sure that there wasn't a rat left in the big barn. He knew that they had all moved to the farmhouse. They had been bad enough when they had lived in the big barn, but they were ever so much worse living in his house. He knew that rats did not move like this without a cause. This meant that they must have been driven out of the big barn, and who or what could have driven them out was more than the farmer could guess. For years he had tried to get rid of the rats there and hadn't been able to. Now suddenly they had deserted the big barn and taken possession of his house.

"I wish," said the farmer, "I could find out what drove those rats over here. Then perhaps I could use the same means to drive them out of the house."

"I wish you could," replied his wife. "I don't know what we're going to do. Those rats are getting so bold that they don't pay any attention to me at all. They run across the pantry floor in broad daylight. The only way I can keep food safe from them is in tin cans or earthen jars with covers and they have managed even to get the covers off some of these. They get in the flour barrel. They have spoiled the milk; they have stolen the eggs; in fact, there isn't anything they haven't got into. They keep me awake nights by their squealing and racing about through the walls. They're getting so bold that I'm actually afraid of them."

So the farmer set all his traps. He set traps in the attic and in the pantry and in the woodshed. He put poisoned food where he was sure the rats would find it. But it was all in vain. Those rats had learned all about traps, and the gray old leader of them had learned to be suspicious of food left where it was easy to get. He warned the other rats not to touch this food. The farmer blocked up the holes in the pantry walls, but as fast as he blocked them up the rats gnawed new ones.

So it was that the farmer and his wife were in despair. Do what they would, they couldn't get rid of those rats. The rats got into the cellar and stole vegetables. It got so that the farmer's wife didn't dare go down to the cellar. She was afraid of being bitten by a rat, and you know the bite of a rat is often poisonous.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

HERE are several recipes that it will pay you to try out.

Sweet Cider Jelly.

Before the sweet cider has grown sour prepare a few glasses of this delightful jelly: Measure one quart of sweet apple cider, add seven and one-half cupsful of sugar, stir and bring to a boil. Add one cupful of pectin, bring to a boil and boil hard for one minute. Remove and let stand one minute, skim and pour into jelly glasses. Cover the hot jelly with a thin layer of paraffin, then when cold cover with another layer, and there will be no air spaces to spoil the jelly. This recipe makes about eleven glasses of jelly.

Dixie Cake.

Take one and one-half cupsful of granulated sugar, one-half cupful of shortening, cream together, then add one cupful of fresh coconut milk and grated coconut. Add three cupsful of flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt, add one-half teaspoonful of grated lemon peel and two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and bake in a well oiled loaf pan.

Appetizing Salad.

On a bed of crisp fresh water-cress or lettuce lay three slices of tomato. Sprinkle this generously with chopped sour pickle, celery hearts and sweet peppers, using the same amount of each. Add your favorite dressing and place a small sweet pickle on top of each. This is particularly good with steak or fowl. Pineapple is most delicious with all kinds of meats. TIDIED UP

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY cleaned my desk, straight as a string,
While I was out of town,
And now I cannot find a thing
The place I put it down.
A pile of this, a pile of that,
I meant to do some day,
But now I don't know where they're at—
I didn't, anyway.

I used to burrow here and there
In search of that or this,
But now it isn't anywhere,
And that is what I miss.
I used to have to hunt for stuff;
A little time it took;
As if that weren't bad enough,
Now there's no place to look.

And yet already things begin
To clutter as before,
And ev'ry time the mail comes in
It adds a little more.
I've found my glasses, not the case,
I've lost my fountain pen,
It won't be long before the place
Will seem like home again.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

THE first, or nail, joint of the thumb indicates, as preceding lessons have shown, the kind and degree of its owner's will. While an accurate index of this quality of temperament is essential to a correct analysis of character through study of the hand, the amount of logic indicated must also be determined.

The Thumbs as an Index of Logic.

The second, or middle, joint of the thumb may be relied upon to tell us of this important complement of character. This element will clearly indicate its owner's love and powers of meditation, concentration and ability to think things out.

Length and symmetry and the prominence of the knuckle itself will make our conclusions reliable on this point. The length of the middle joint in its relation to that of the first, or nail, joint, should be carefully compared. If both are of even length there is every indication that the will is well controlled by sound judgment. If with this, the knuckle is unusually knobby or otherwise prominent, we have the man or woman who painstakingly and with greater-than-average amount of research studies every move in the game of life.

Coupled with a firm nail joint, this analytical and clear-thinking combination is one of the surest signs of the man or woman whose decisions and actions seldom go forth "I told you so's."

Simple, Practical Frocks

WHERE, oh where is the feminine wardrobe that through the addition of just these three simple, wearable frocks? Surely like the Model T, it would be hard to find. And the thrilling thing—the important feature—is that these frocks are planned and patterned exclusively for the modern woman who sews—for you, a member of The Sewing Circle.

Pattern 1914 is a house dress with a future. It is young and practical. The new notched collar, ending as it does in twin scallops below the yoke line, gives the waist front balance and brightness. The bodice is slightly flared to make this a comfortable style to work in as well as one that is attractive to look at. The skirt is slim lined and simple—as you would have it. Use dimity, dotted swiss or gingham for this number. Designed for sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3 3/4 yards of 35 inch material.

Pattern 1989 is the polite young model caught with its back this way, perhaps the better to show off the beautiful shoulders and chicest-of-chic descending lines. You'll run-up this frock in short order but you'll wear it endlessly and with that happy confidence which only a style with distinction can give. Make it of raspberry wool crepe and trim the collar, cuffs and hem with royal blue. Pattern 1989 comes in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 3 yards of 54 inch material with 5 yards of braid for trimming.

Pattern 1206 is a most attractive newcomer to the blouse 'n' skirt category. An alliance of this sort brings glamour and romance to the gay wearer. Gold or silver metallic cloth, or perhaps shimmering satin for the blouse with a skirt of velvet will make a million dollar outfit. Make it yours in a couple of hours. It is available in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards of 39 inch material for the blouse and 2 1/2 yards for the skirt. The blouse with long sleeves requires 2 1/2 yards 39 inches wide.

A detailed sewing chart accompanies each pattern to guide you every step of the way.

THE OTHER WOMAN LIVES JUST AROUND THE CORNER

IT may seem unreasonable, but most men cannot understand why a woman who is usually happy and loving should have recurring periods when her whole character seems changed. He cannot appreciate the distress, the discomfort that all women must endure. He does not know what it is to do housework with an aching back and falling energy. All he does know is that other women seem more cheerful by comparison.

Are you such a three-quarter wife? Don't let the ordeals that all women face cause you avoidable discomfort or endanger your home. Do as so many wise women have—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

About Money

Washington. — When President Roosevelt took office for his first term, one of the outstanding observations that he made was to the effect that the American people "feared fear" and of this condition was born instability. It was a remarkable statement and the truth of it may not now even be denied. It accurately presented one of the fundamental influences disturbing American life and if that psychology could have been completely swept away, I believe things would have been different now.

As I remember, I commented at that time upon the new President's remark. Subsequently, I called attention to the conditions of administration policy under the New Deal that were necessarily causing a continuation of that "fear of fear" instead of calming the nation's nerves.

As Mr. Roosevelt closes his first term and begins his second tenure, I believe it is entirely proper again to advert to his significant and truthful observation of 1933. We can look at this picture only in retrospect, regrettable as it is that we cannot see into the future. It would then seem to be an entirely permissible thing to do to examine the basis of Mr. Roosevelt's observation and see what has been done to correct the condition about which he complained.

I shall not attempt to go into the various phases of the four-year term. Indeed, I think it is neither advisable nor necessary to analyze conditions beyond those that are basic, fundamental, in our national economic and political structure.

For that reason, and because of recent developments of administrative policy, I am writing something about money in this report to you.

The Scripture quotation is: "The love of money is the root of all evil." In treating of the subject of money from our practical standpoint, "the love of money" takes on quite an unusual definition. For, may I point out in candor, there never has been a national administration, so far as my research goes, that has so thoroughly loved the spending of money. I believe Mr. Roosevelt himself enjoys it but Mr. Roosevelt is not the chief offender of his administration in this regard. The two men whose records stand out with an absurd willingness to throw money around as I used to throw pebbles when I was a boy on a Missouri farm are Harry Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, and Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture. I am quite convinced that Mr. Hopkins is the worse of the two. My conclusion is based on a conviction that Mr. Hopkins is the more wasteful. I am afraid that when the history of this great depression is set down in the cold light of facts as they will appear a quarter of a century from now, Mr. Hopkins will have a place in that spotlight that will not do credit to the hundreds of people who have the real welfare of the poor at heart.

Money for Relief

The latest development concerning Mr. Hopkins in his public statement that there must be at least three-quarters of a billion new money appropriated for his relief work. President Roosevelt previously had said he would ask congress for only half a billion. It is difficult to reconcile these two statements or the reasons therefor. Some slipshod thing has taken place or else Mr. Hopkins again is indulging in his favorite sport of spending and wasting taxpayers' money.

Now, the figures reveal that relief operations, as managed by Mr. Hopkins, are costing about $165,000,000 a month. If Mr. Roosevelt intends to use only $500,000,000 for relief, curtailment in sharp fashion must take place. If no such curtailment is intended, even the Hopkins figure is too small.

Thus, we are brought face to face again with a question: What is to be the policy? I hear more and more discussion as congress gets under way that some definite statement ought to be made, some commitment given, so that the nation would know what it is proposed to do with all of this money and how much of it is to be used.

Incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt recently spoke rather curtly to some of his departmental heads about their printing bills. He thought they were too large and that money should be saved in that direction. Now, it happens governmental printing bills amount to no more than a drop in the bucket when compared to the waste that goes on in the enormous relief set-up of which Mr. Hopkins is the head. It has been shown too many times to need elaboration here.

Since Mr. Roosevelt has taken note of the departmental printing bills, however, I would like to make the suggestion that there is no valid reason any longer for excluding relief appropriations from the regular estimates of expenditures as included in the annual budget. Like many other items, the relief totals may have to be revised later, but that does not excuse the rather careless practices that have grown up in the calculation of relief expenditures. It does not exclude the necessity for a real protection against heedless spending nor does it prevent the formulation of intelligent policies.

Individually, I do not quite understand why the administration should fuss about a few millions of printing bills and toss out half a billion or three-quarters of a billion, as the case may be, with reckless abandon when such tossing is done without any evident continuity of sound policy.

I referred to Secretary Wallace's spending proclivities. Mr. Wallace has been going Wallace Talks Money about the country lately talking of the necessity for soil conservation and the payment of a subsidy to farmers to accomplish that end. He has been talking about money in sums as large as a billion dollars a year for crop insurance—a program in furtherance of Mr. Wallace's "ever normal granary" idea.

In theory, there is much to be said in favor of spreading unpredictable losses of farming through insurance. A large part of the distress found in agricultural regions is due to the destruction of crops by causes over which the farmers have no control. If the consequences of these hazards could be minimized by adjusting losses over wide areas, and by using the surplus of one year to offset the shortage of the next, one major farm problem would be solved. But, as matters now stand, there is a natural tendency to regard this move with a skeptical eye. This is necessary because, like so many theories, the Wallace crop insurance, ever normal granary plan seems to omit the one element that is necessary to be included. If this proposition is to be successful, there simply can be no doubt that it must have almost unanimous support. It does not have it and never will. The reason is that it calls upon the government to pay part or all of the cost and human nature inevitably resents taking from one to give to another.

Mr. Wallace's ideas were adopted by the President's crop insurance committee. That committee was supposed to have the interest of agriculture at heart. Its recommendations indicate that it had not only such an interest but an even greater interest, namely, making sure that the farmers were given everything.

From all of the discussions that I have heard, I believe it is quite apparent that the committee went too far. It went so far, indeed, that it is arousing resentment from the consumers who think that they will have to pay the bill. Therefore, by proposing a program that is too extreme, the crop insurance committee and Mr. Wallace have forced a cleavage between producer and consumer and that is likely to result in a renewal of warfare between these two segments of our national life. It will cause a revival of an age-old quarrel instead of a healing of old wounds.

No one can deny that the farmers, as a class, have not been getting their fair share. From the attitude of many thinking farmers, however, I rather believe that agriculture would prefer to have a farm aid program which would permit it to produce and sell to the consumers under harmonious conditions and regulations rather than get too much and earn the hatred of the masses who are to buy the farmers' output.

To advert to the original theme, Mr. Wallace likes to pass out money. He knows, as all others in public life know, that the government will be generous with agriculture and I am afraid that fact has caused the otherwise genial secretary of agriculture to lose his perspective—to forget that he is fostering a program that will change traditions and practices on the farms of America as surely as the sun shines.

Farmers are human as everyone else is human. Some of them, like some of us, who must exist among modern cliff dwellings of concrete and steel, entertain a fear that a policy of government payments equivalent to a dole, may have the effect in the end of destroying rather than saving the business of agriculture.

Our Early Watches

The first watches were produced in all sorts of fanciful designs, with cases shaped like crosses or shells or mandolins, says a writer in the Washington Star. A peculiar fashion was that of a watch-case shaped like a skull, to remind the owner when he looked at it that time was fleeting and death was drawing near. The lovely and unlucky Mary Queen of Scots had a skull-shaped watch, and in view of her death on the headsman's block it was gruesomely appropriate. Cavaliers had swords and poniards with little watches set into the hilts.

PREFERRED TO THE COSTLIEST SHORTENINGS

• The Vegetable Fat in Jewel is given remarkable shortening properties by Swift's special blending of it with other bland cooking fats. Jewel Special-Blend actually makes lighter, more tender baked foods, and creams faster than the costliest types of plain all-vegetable shortening.

YOU CAN ALWAYS GET TO TOWN

with Firestone GROUND GRIP TIRES

GROUND GRIP TIRES bring a new freedom to the farmer—freedom to go anywhere, any time, in any weather. No longer do bad roads, snow and thaws mean isolation.

In deep snow, mud or sand, Firestone Ground Grip Tires go right through without spinning or stalling—you can always get to town.

The Firestone Ground Grip Tire was developed to overcome the difficulties of winter transportation on the farm. Firestone engineers, working under the personal direction of Harvey S. Firestone on his Columbiana, Ohio, farm, tested and proved the Ground Grip Tire under the worst possible weather and road conditions. This tire is so different in design and so superior in performance that a patent on it was issued by the United States Patent Office. The heavy rubber lugs of the tread are without equal for traction. They take hold and keep going where other tires get stuck—and you don't need chains.

Don't let bad roads and bad weather keep you isolated this winter. See your nearby Firestone Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today.

Who Says That Nobody Loves a Policeman?

There is one thing sure... that isn't true so far, at least, as Officer Finney is concerned. You know Finney—Finney of the Force—whose comical adventures are portrayed for readers of this paper by Ted O'Loughlin, brilliant young artist. This genial copper gets a lot of fun out of the things that happen day by day as he travels his beat, and the fun is passed on to you as you read of his activities.

Have a laugh with Finney and tell your friends about him.
